Welcome to Cherokee!

Cherokee sits in the beautiful Little Sioux River Valley in Northwest Iowa. We are located at the junction of U.S. Hwy 59 and State Hwy. 3, about 60 miles northeast of Sioux City, IA. The Little Sioux River winds through town and provides an excellent recreational source for fishing and canoeing as well as a backdrop to a beautiful park system.

Our Historic Downtown was built in the 1870's and features many unique shopping opportunities. Cherokee's Main Street was designated as a Cultural District by the State of Iowa in 2004. Live music and entertainment can be heard throughout the year, but especially during the annual Kee Live Music Festival.

We suggest that you visit local attractions like the Sanford Museum and Planetarium, Iowa's first accredited museum and one of only 3 public planetariums in the state. Or drive through the beautiful century old MHI campus on the west edge of town.

Cherokee is home to great community events such as the Cherokee PRCA Rodeo, Cherokee County Fair, Cherokee Symphony and Cherokee Community Theater.

The Cherokee Chamber of Commerce invites you to spend some time with us. Whether you are looking for something entertaining to do this weekend, or a new community to call home, a good place to shop or a place to open a new business, Cherokee is Your Place to Be.

Sanford Museum and Planetarium

The Sanford Museum and Planetarium was the first accredited museum in the State of Iowa. The museum boasts a permanent collection as well as rotating displays on a variety of subjects including: archaeology, art, astronomy, geology, history, natural history, and paleontology. A recently completed Ice Age exhibit is on permanent display in the lower level. Monthly programs are organized by the museum association. The public planetarium was the first in Iowa and is one of only three in Iowa.

Address: 117 East Willow | Phone: 712.225.3922

Visit Their Website at www.sanfordmuseum.org

Depot Renovation

The railroad was the key reason for the growth of Cherokee. The depot and entire railroad complex are listed in the National Register of Historic places. The Depot Renovation works to preserve the Illinois Central Railroad Depot located in Cherokee. The depot includes an HO scale model railroad and Northwest Iowa Railroad Museum. In the summer months, the depot is home to the Cherokee Area Farmer's Market.

Address: 119 South 4th Street | Phone: 712.225.4664

Visit Their Website at www.cherokeedepot.org

Lily of the Valley #5 One Room School

The one-room schoolhouse located in Cherokee is operated seasonally by the Cherokee County Retired School Teachers. Their goal is to create a living history center for children and adults to preserve and promote Iowa's rich educational heritage. From May through September, the school is available for school trips, curriculum for school use, adult programs and tours.

Address: 2020 Hwy 3

Cherokee County Freedom Rock

The Cherokee County Freedom Rock was painted by artist Ray "Buba" Sorensen and is part of the Iowa Freedom Rock Tour. The veterans depicted on the rock include Royal Johnson, Father Major General Francis Sampson, Ben Laposky and Harry McManus. Each have their own special stories of serving our country. The Freedom Rock was sponsored by the Cherokee VFW and is located in front of the Cherokee Co. Courthouse.

Address: 520 West Main Street, Cherokee.

Cherokee Mental Health Institute

The Cherokee Mental Health Institute is a state of Iowa psychiatric facility, operating under the Department of Human services. The facility opened in 1902 and originally sat on 600 acres. Today, the beautiful campus and buildings serve as a landmark in Cherokee that you don't want to miss. The Joseph A. Tallman museum was established in 1961 to educate and inform the general public as well as health science professionals about the history of the care and treatment of the mentally ill at public institutions in Iowa. Tours are available with advance notice.

Address: 1251 West Cedar Loop, Cherokee
Phone: 712.225.2594

Cherokee Symphony

Cherokee could be the smallest city in the country to boast their own symphony orchestra. The orchestra provides the community with the highest quality musical entertainment while giving musicians in the area a semi-professional outlet for their talents. The symphony was founded in 1956 and has been under the direction of Lee Thorson since 1981. This 60-member orchestra has been referred to as "the best kept secret in Northwest Iowa".

Little Sioux River and Inkpaduta Canoe Trail

Within Cherokee County, the Little Sioux River strikes a scenic pose, meandering through a valley rich in history and natural resources. Many of the Cherokee County Parks offer foot access to the river, and some offer a canoe or boat ramp. The Little Sioux River offers excellent fishing, scenic and wildlife opportunities, as well as canoeing.

Cherokee County is home to 43 miles of the Inkpaduta Canoe Trail on the Little Sioux River. This 143-mile trail, which was named after the Sioux Chief who was involved in the Spirit Lake Massacre, is a wonderful way to see wildlife, discover local history, and visit the parks. The Inkpaduta Canoe Trail follows the meandering Little Sioux River through six northwest Iowa counties, including Cherokee.

Cherokee Golf and Country Club

Golf enthusiasts won't want to miss this 9 Hole Golf Course with its challenging terrain. The Cherokee Golf and Country Club is home of the annual Sioux Valley Match Play Tournament, Iowa's oldest Match Play Tournament. While you are there, be sure to visit The Chateau restaurant, located inside the country club.

History of Cherokee

Pre-Settlement Period

Cherokee County was one of 49 divided from Indian Treaty lands by the Third Iowa Assembly in 1851. The lawmen picked a name that had no connection with the area or with its history. The Little Sioux River winds through Cherokee County, making it one of the most scenic in western Iowa. The river and its tributaries have carved deep into the glacial till. Many high points afford beautiful vistas-the best of all is seen from the top of Pilot Rock, a huge boulder of red Sioux quartzite left by the last glacier. On a hill south of Cherokee, the rock served as a guidepost and meeting place for Native Americans and Pioneers.

Early Beginning

Pioneers made their homes in the fertile, wooded valley before venturing to develop the open plains. After scouting the area in 1856, Robert Perry picked a spot by the river in Pilot Township for the county's first home. While getting supplies at Sergeant Bluff, he met two scouts of the Milford Massachusetts Immigration Company. They were seeking land for their members whose wagons were close behind. After Perry's vivid description of "his valley", the scouts walked up the Little Sioux River.

Settlement Period

The Scouts chose a site on the west side of the river, northeast of the present city of Cherokee. Enough land was secured so that each of the thirteen Milford Colony settlers, who came in 1856, had a town lot, wood lot, and an acreage for farming. Another group of men led by George Banister settled several miles south that same summer.

The First Winter

The first winter was cold and food was scarce. roving Native Americans visited the cabins, amazed at the number of settlers who had invaded their hunting grounds. They demanded food, and killed some of the settler's livestock. As they went further north and found more people, the Native Americans became angry. Read the story of the Spirit Lake Massacre in the spring of 1857 in "Hawkeye Adventure" by Reida Irwin. In 1862, the government built a series of stockades with blockhouses, thus putting an end to the conflicts between the Native Americans and the pioneer settlers in Iowa. Fort Cherokee looked out over the Milford Colony's First pioneer residents.

Coming of the Railroad

During the Civil War, many of the men in the county enlisted and their families withdrew to more populated area. After the war, they came back to their land and homes. Promises of a railroad from Fort Dodge to Sioux City, running through Cherokee, brought many businesses and professional people during the late 1860's. The railroad was finally completed in 1870. It did not cross the Little Sioux where expected, although speculators had built up quite a town near the bridge constructed by the early colonists. Connecting railroads opened up new trade territories in 1888. Larrabee was established as a station on the line from Cherokee to Sioux Falls, South Dakota. On the line south to Onawa, Quimby was platted, and Washta moved across the river to be on the railroad.

New Cherokee

In the summer of 1870, many of these folks moved about a mile and a half to the new depot the railroad had set-up, dragging houses, shops, and their county courthouse with them. New Cherokee grew very fast, and soon had many stores and a newspaper. The newspaper that was started that year is still in existence today although it has changed names and owners many times. Cherokee had a Centennial Celebration in 1956, honoring all the pioneers who Settled this area.

Resources

The gravel deposits near Cherokee are a rich resource. Vast amounts of stone and sand left by ancient glaciers, And sorted by stream action, made excellent material for railway beds and for mud-free roads. Today these gravel beds are essential for highway and other construction. In late 1870, the Illinois Central Railroad began digging into a gravel hill south of Cherokee with a big steam shovel. Countless carloads of this gravel ballast improved the company's roadbeds from here to New Orleans. The hill disappeared and a large pit developed. As this filled with water from natural springs, a sizeable lake formed. Now Koser Spring Lake Park is Cherokee's chief recreation area.

Twentieth Century

Cherokee had many special services to offer. In the summer of 1881, The Fountain House, a resort hotel including an artificial lake fed by mineral springs and horseracing track, was opened. Nothing remains today of the building or site. The Opera House was completed in 1890, and for many years presented wealth of talented performs. In 1905, the Carnegie Public Library was built. A combination of cultural economic features continues to characterize the town and its relationship to the whole region of North-western Iowa.
